To future generations

Marking the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstones of the Hebrew University, is a moment of great significance and a cause for celebration and optimism for the future.

Attached is a copy of a page from the minutes book of 1926 of the medical group of the British Friends of the Hebrew University. It lists some of the most illustrious names of the time – Weizmann, Magnus, Brodetzky and many more. It reflects the indivisible and enduring connection of the British Jewish community to the Hebrew University since its earliest days.

Our hope and vision is that the British Friends will be equally committed and engaged in the development of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem for the next century, an exceptional institution of advanced learning and research dedicated to the betterment of the global community of humankind.
